Let's sit awhile.

Where's my mommy?

HOW WE'VE CHANGED!

I'll think about it.

Look what I've got!

Gee, I'm sleepy

I'm always good.

Smile pretty!

I didn't do it!

He loves me, he loves me not,--

OUR TOWN

Our town is situated in the western part of the state, about ninety miles from Portland on the coast and about fifteen miles from Errol, New Hampshire.

The track of land that is now Andover was officially acquired on September 1, 1788. One of the foremost founders of the town was Ezekiel Merrill formerly of West Newbury, Massachusetts.

Life was not easy in Andover in the early years. Every family had to be almost wholly self-supporting. They received nothing of any account from abroad, except salt, rum, tea, coffee, and tobacco, along with iron rods for nails, which had to be turned out by hand. Every man had to have a good flock of sheep, because the wool was the chief material in the making of clothing. These conditions existed for about fifty years after the first settlement of the town.

Andover today is still not a big, booming, industrial town, but to many people (residents and summer tourists) it is one of the best and prettiest towns they have ever seen.

Andover has few industries except for three or four lumber mills. Just recently it has become the host of the Satalite Communications System being erected not far from Andover by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Andover also has one of the most carefully selected libraries in the world.

Andover supports two schools, one elementary and one high school. Every year, the first Monday in March, town meeting is held. At this meeting the school budget of the past and the following year receive most of the attention.

Perhaps sometime Andover will be a bustling city; nevertheless, Andover has come a long way since the first settlements of 1788.
